Dear Colleague,

On behalf of the 27 elected Board Members of SACD, representing French-speaking writers and directors of motion pictures, television and theatre, I want to express the full support of SACD's membership in your struggle to seek compensation for the dissemination of creative work in any media.

Authors' creations are the essence of the American entertainment industry's success all over the world. It is incomprehensible, indeed, unacceptable, that the most legitimate right of authors to make a living from their creations throughout their exploitation should be fought for with so much difficulty, again and again.

US Writers are, by their determination, helping their European colleagues to assert their most essential rights in the digital environment.

It is a great testimony to the courage and determination of your guild's leadership and members that the majority have put the collective interests above individual priorities. We salute each and every member who has elected to go through these very challenging times.

Best regards,

Jacques Fansten
